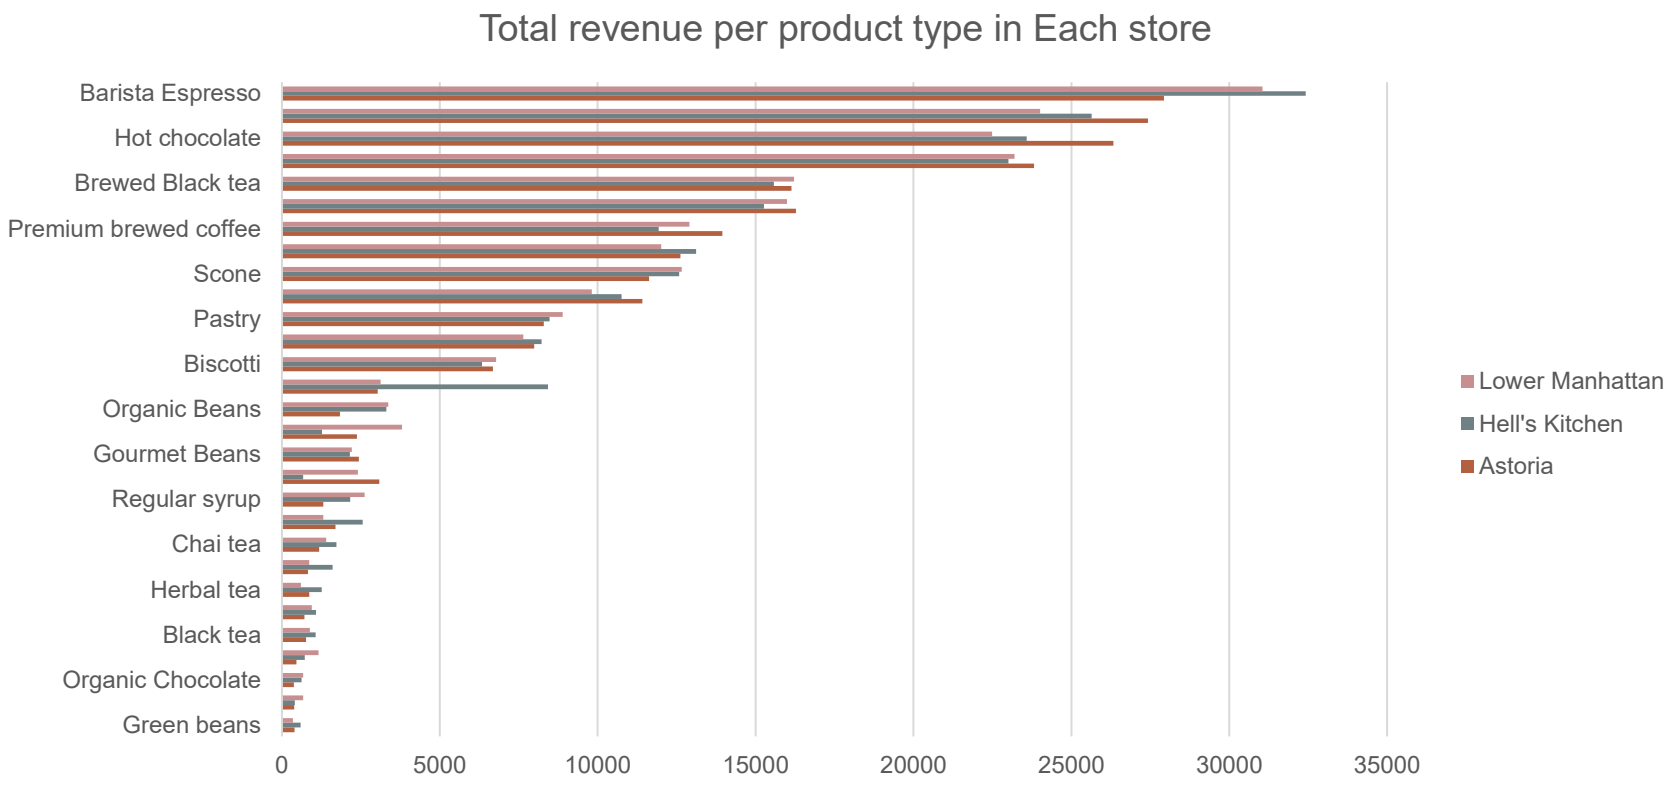
Prepared by Anwani Tshusa

INTRODUCTION

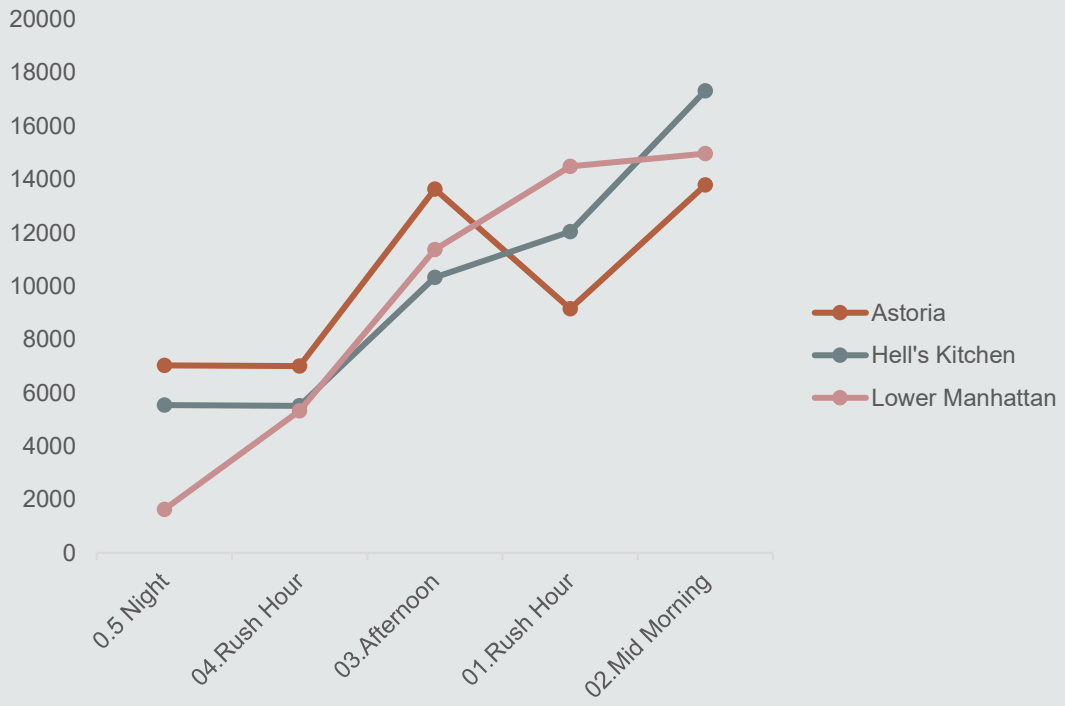
1. Revenue Performance Overview
2. Customer Purchase Behavior & Time-of-Day Analysis
3. Product Category & Best-Seller Insights
4. Store-Level Revenue Comparison
5. Recommendations

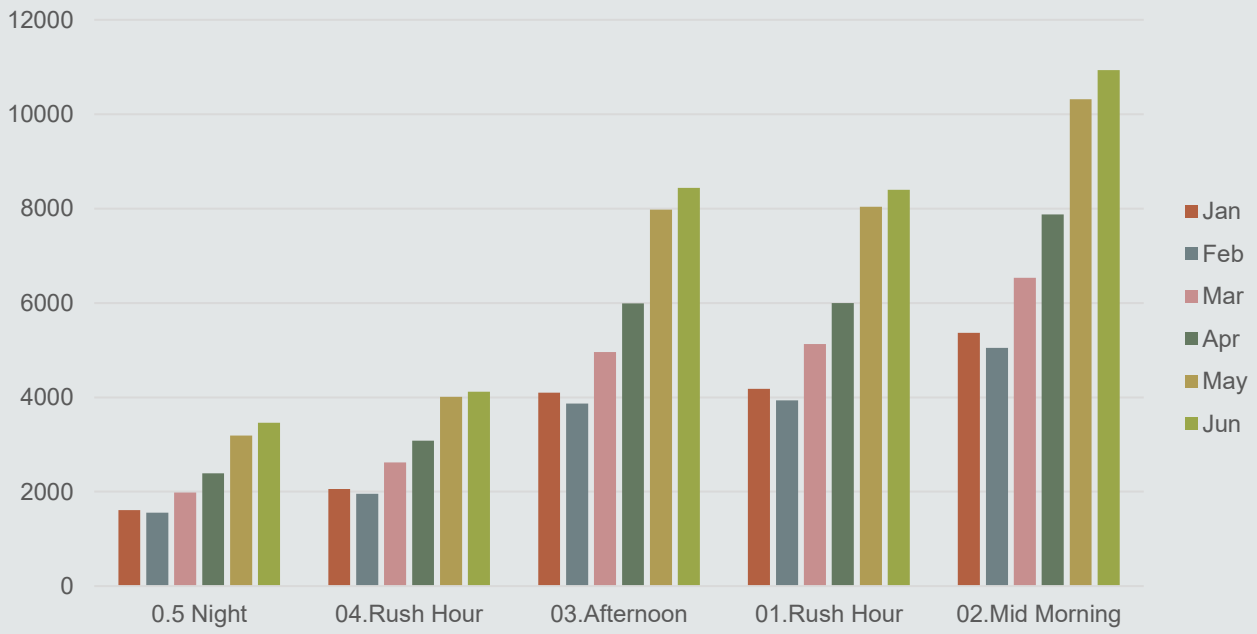
TOTAL REVENUE PER PRODUCT



- The highest-earning items were brewed beverages (Brewed Black Tea, Brewed Chai Tea, Barista Espresso)
- Packaged goods like Beans, Pastries and Hot Chocolate also contributed significantly, showing strong retail potential

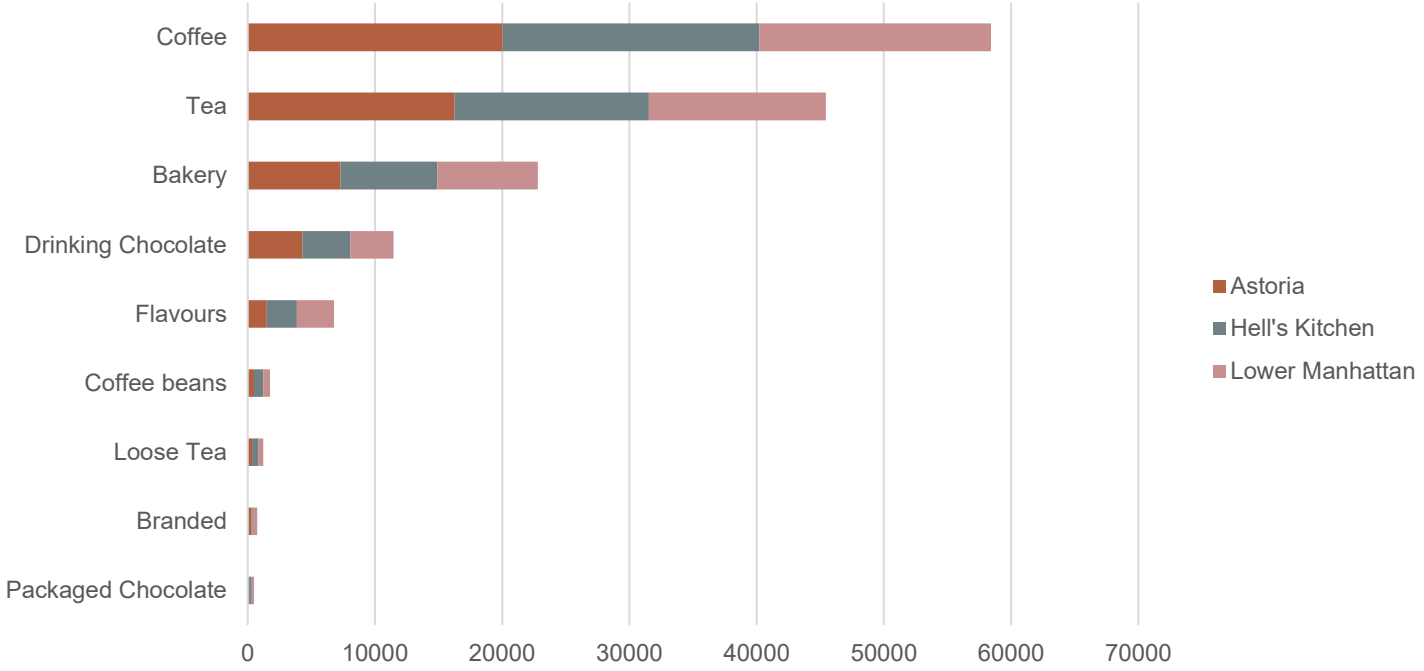
PEAK TIME INTERVALS FOR SALES





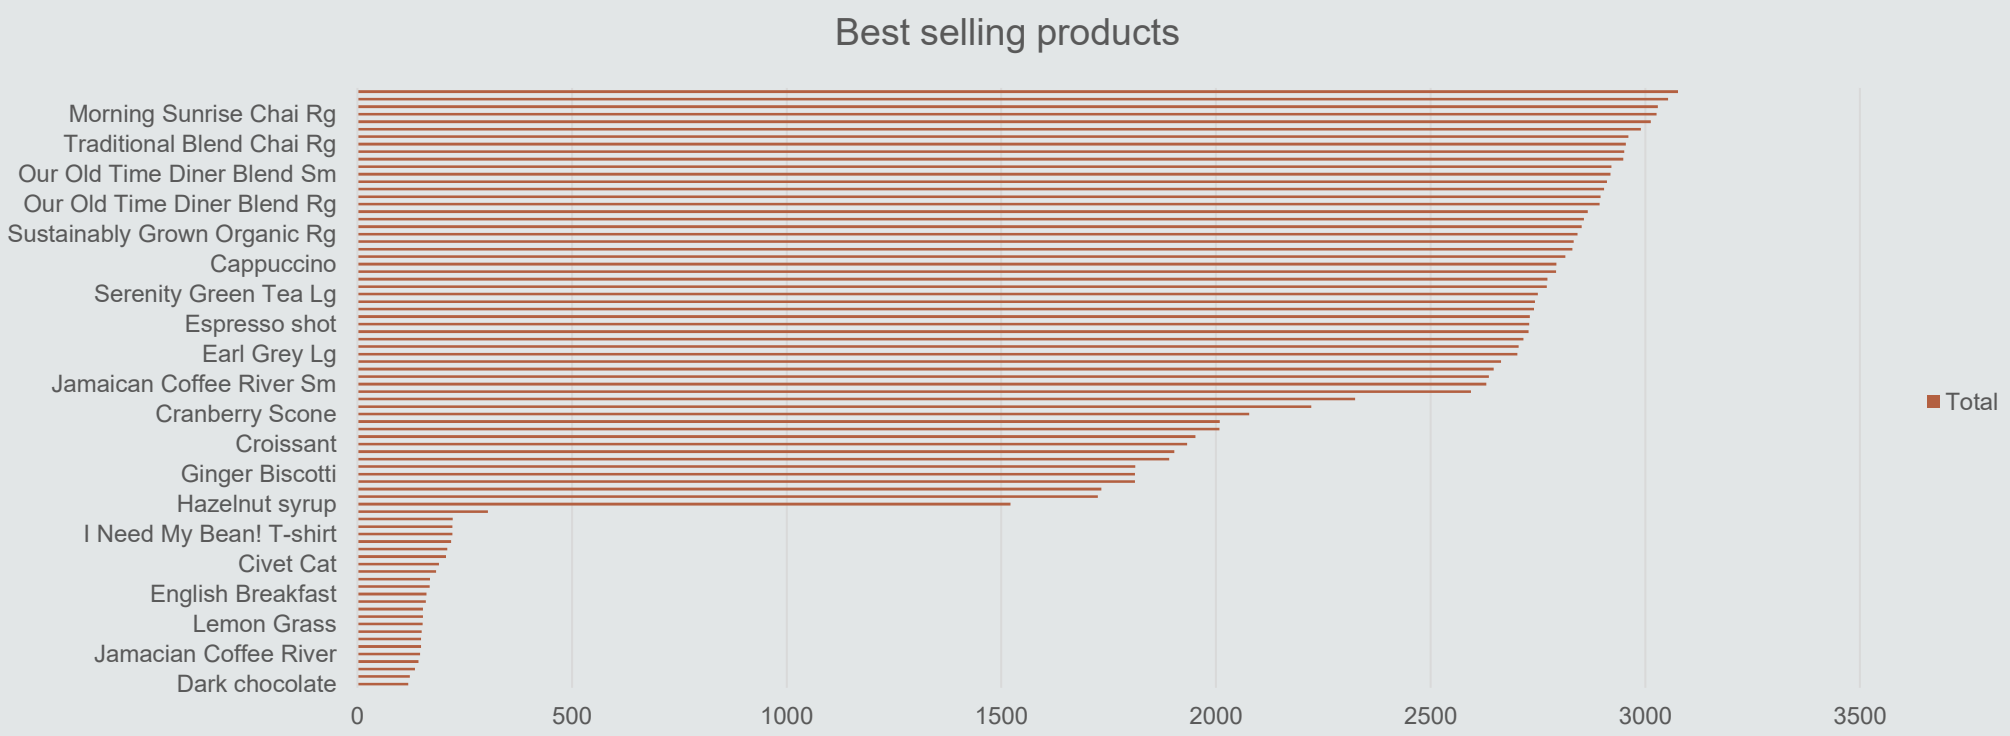
- Peak sales occur during Rush Hour and Mid-Morning.
- Late evening / Night performance is significantly lower, we have an opportunity for targeted marketing

QUANTITY SOLD BY PRODUCT CATEGORY



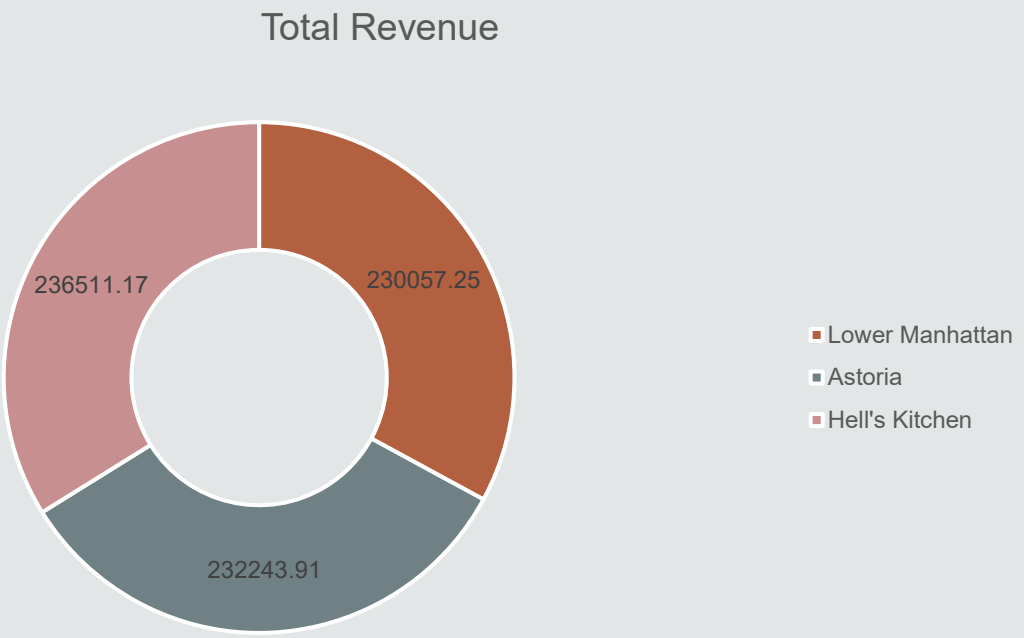
- Tea and Coffee categories dominate in units sold.
- Bakery items appear consistently strong, ideal for upselling with beverages

BEST-SELLING PRODUCT DETAILS



- Barista Espresso, Brewed Black Tea, Brewed Chai Tea lead both revenue and volume
- High-margin products like specialty drinks should be prioritized in campaigns.

STORE REVENUE COMPARISON



- Lower Manhattan outperforms other locations due to higher foot traffic
- Astoria and Hell’s Kitchen show potential but require tailored promotions

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Marketing Campaigns During Low Traffic

- Offer late-afternoon combo deals
- Introduce happy hours on slow days
- Launch loyalty program based on peak time behavior
- Push loyalty points boosters during non-peak time slots

2. Increase Stock & Visibility of Best-Selling Items

- Ensure full availability of Brewed Chai Tea, Brewed Black Tea, Barista Espresso
- Add featured signage/barista promos

3. Promote Underperforming Items

- Create seasonal drink promotions
- Bundle underperforming products with top sellers
